

TAYLOR SCHILLING ON DEKALB AVENUE IN BROOKLYN

Actress TAYLOR SCHILLING knew what to expect the first time she visited New York City. As an 11-year-old, she had already binge-watched many of Woody Allen's New York films: Annie Hall, Manhattan, Broadway Danny Rose. "I didn't realize it, but I'd been preparing to visit the city for so long," she says. "And then I got here, and I thought, 'This is where I wanna be.'" Twenty years later, Schilling is being binge-watched on the Netflix show Orange Is the New Black (though, hopefully, not by 11-year-olds), which kicks off its fourth season June 17. In late 2015, Schilling migrated from Manhattan to a leafy neighborhood in Brooklyn filled with gorgeous 19th-century architecture. "I have more space here than I've had in a long time," she says. — PAIGE DARRAH

Walter's
"I like to do brunch at Walter's," a bustling bistro with a raw bar at dinner (oysters, littleneck clams, lobsters) and a menu mascot that's a timid-looking merrow: a cow with a mermaid tail.

Fort Greene Park Greenmarket
"This farmers market on Saturdays is a [collection] of Brooklyn-y things, like artisanal honey and granola." Visitors can also enjoy live music and cooking demos.

Feliz
"This round of moving, I really discovered the importance of scented candles; they make a space feel so much better. Feliz has amazing sandalwood candles, and it's my go-to for housewarming gifts."

Bittersweet
"A recent trip to Italy spoiled me. But I moved to the right place—there are a lot of people who care a lot about coffee around here. Bittersweet has the best espresso!"
