Archeologists exploring Inwood Hill Park found small mounds of waste called middens. The middens contained mostly shells from the seafood the Lenape ate from the river. What might we leave behind for future archeologists to find when exploring the places we bury our waste? Compare waste from our lunch today with a meal eaten by the Native Americans.

What can we do to minimize the waste we leave behind?

For more resources and downloadable Green Team materials, check out the Recycling Champions website www.grownyc.org/RCP